Quiet and Graphic Description of the American Victory.Ships Cheered By Britishers—Baltimore more Prominent—The Movement from Hong Kong—250-lb Shell.

The hosts of the town yesterday were the Belgic passengers fresh from the scene of the great triumph of American arms as directed by Admiral Dewey. Those aboard who saw the fight in Manila bay were Col. A. G. Loud, paymaster on the McCulloch, Dr. Chas. P. Kindelberger of the Olympia and J. C. Evans, a gunner of the Boston. They, with Mr. Phelps of the McCulloch, who was left in Hong Kong for duty when the fleet went to battle, are returning to the States under orders. All hope to soon again sail over the Pacific and join vessels in the Dewey fleet. The passengers were much sought after by prominent citizens and by officers of the Charleston and Bennington. Col. Loud, who saw the fight from the McCulloch, had prepared for the Advertiser the following account of the fleet movements and the engagement:

The Hugh McCulloch arrived in Hong Kong on April 17 and joined the fleet consisting of the Olympia, Baltimore, Raleigh, Concord, Petrel and two transports.

Two days after our arrival the transfer of the McCulloch was made from the Treasury Department to the Secretary of the Navy.

On May 23d, the Governor of Hong Kong sent a request to the Commodore to leave Hong Kong within 24 hours, as a state of war existed. The Commodore replied that he would leave immediately with the ships that did not need repairs and take the others as soon as possible.

At 2 o'clock, the Boston, Concord, Petrel, Hugh McCulloch and two transports left and went to Mirs Bay, 30 miles distant. On Monday, the Olympia, Baltimore and Raleigh followed.

The Baltimore arrived in Hong Kong on Thursday, the 21st of April and in 48 hours had gone in the dry dock and been painted and put in order. As the fleet passed the English receiving ships they gave us three cheers. We waited a day for Mr. Williams, the Consul at Manila, who came up on the Esmeralda. At 11 o'clock, we started with Olympia leading the line of ships, the six fighting ships being in one line and the McCulloch and two transports in another.

On Saturday morning, we arrived off Point B, the first land we sighted. At daybreak the Boston and Concord were ordered ahead at full speed. By 11 o'clock they were out of sight. At 11 o'clock, the Baltimore went ahead. They had gone to Subig Bay and by 5 o'clock all the other ships had arrived there. It had been reported that the Spanish fleet was there, but we found nothing at all. A boat was lowered from the Concord and sent ashore, but not a person could be found. All Commanders were then ordered on the flagship for further orders.

At 6 o'clock we started ahead again at about six miles per hour, it being the intention to pass the forts at midnight. No lights were shown, except a green one on the stern of each ship. At 11 o'clock, the crews were called to quarters and at 11:30, we were abreast of Cor. Island, the entrance of Manila Bay. On one side is a channel one mile wide, the one on the other side being five miles. There are forts on the top of Cor. Island and also on the main land.

We were advised that there were mines in the harbor. As we were opposite the island we saw a rocket go up from the island and answered from the shore. We were now between the island and main land. The night was very dark, making it hard to see anything.

All the ships passed by without notice. They now could see our stern lights and we saw a flash and then a shell struck in the water ahead of us followed by several more. We answered with three shots. No further shots came from the forts and we passed on. The next day these forts surrendered.

We went forward at about 5 knots and at 5 o'clock we saw Manila with the merchant ships showing up in front of it and a battery on the other side.

At 5:15, a heavy gun was fired at us and shots also came from the Manila shore. As the day advanced further, our ships moved up the bay, but did not return the fire. The Spanish fleet of eleven ships was anchored a little off Cavite, but none of them had steam up.

As our ships came towards the Spanish fleet the 5-inch rapid fire guns of the Olympia were started. The Baltimore, Raleigh, Concord, Petrel and Boston came in the order named. It was a quiet morning and no air was stirring and the ships were quickly enveloped in a dense bank of smoke.

Our ships went past the forts and ships three times before the Reina Christina got steam up and then she came out to attack the Olympia, but she never got near enough, as a constant rain of shots went into her. As she turned to go back an 8-inch shell from the Olympia, weighing 250 pounds struck her stern and passing clear through her fore and aft, killed 60 men.

A little later we saw a black vessel stealing out towards the Hugh McCulloch but every ship turned their fire on it and she sunk under the forts.

The ships had now completed their fifth time past the forts and fleet and came out to give the men a breathing spell and breakfast, as the fight was to be resumed shortly.

At 11 o'clock, the Baltimore went in under a full head of steam and led the fight against the fort. This fort was made of sand piled 15 or 20 feet high. The Olympia followed 20 minutes later. The Spanish would not take down their flag and at last the Petrel steamed within 1,200 yards and soon brought the flag down.

The only injuries on the American side were four or five men slightly scratched by flying splinters and one man let a shell drop on his leg and broke it. The Olympia was hit 13 times.

The Spaniards lost 400 killed and had 300 wounded. Dewey has Manila Bay and would take the town if he had men to garrison it.

QUALITY FURNITURE.

It's easy enough to sell cheap things cheap. But they never prove cheap. If cheap things could be made so that they would give uncomplaining satisfaction we might handle them. As it is we look to the satisfaction giving qualities of what we sell—and depend on our buying abilities—buying in big lots, etc., to bring prices within the popular plane.

Between Doing and Saying

there's a vast difference. Merely quoting a low price signifies nothing. It's the value that makes the bargain.
